

“The number of hunters in the United States has steadily decreased over the past several years. If I were put in charge of recruiting more people to participate in hunting, I would make videos about how fun hunting can be.”

I would tell people how fun the outdoors is and all the nice people you can meet. I would even try and take people hunting that have never been before and see if they get their heart racing with adrenalin when they see that big buck and if their heart does race maybe they will start hunting on their own and take their family with them.

It is fun to be around the campfire with family and friends telling stories after a day of hunting, people might like it better with people they know. After a new hunter shoots a deer I would get them to try eating some of the deer, they might feel far more accomplished since they killed it.

I would show the all the other animals and birds there are to see while in your stand or while walking around, like hogs, squirrels, all different kinds of birds and the different kinds of deer. Being outdoors could also get people to enjoy the environment and take care of it. My family and I enjoy the outdoors and I want to share the experience!

Justin - age 12